Australian native plants used in different combinations

illustrated the versatility and beauty of our local flora

15 NATIVES REINVENTED. 'September Sky', the space created by UK designers Andrew Fisher Tomlin and Tom Harfleet, starred a selection of Australian native plants. Eucalyptus trees, gymea lilies, hardy westringia and perennials such as lomandra are ideal for those seeking low-water and low-maintenance outdoor spaces. The plantings were intermingled with aggregate in different sizes for a stunning dry garden, ranged around a roofless timber pavilion, designed to enjoy clear blue spring skies.

This half-moon timber structure at the other end of Andrew and Tom's garden might have resembled a random pile of timber but was actually a seat. Its deconstructed shape and appearance looked perfectly at home among the foliage and rocks. >
